JASN - EDITORIAL LEADERSHIP

Established in 1990, the Journal of the American Society of Nephrology (JASN) is a premiere publication of the American Society of Nephrology. It is the most effective means for communicating to nephrologists and others in related specialties critical information of broad significance in the field.

JASN publishes original articles of high quality that are relevant to the broad field of Nephrology. Nephrology is an alliance of scientists and physicians who seek to understand the function of the kidneys and the means to improve the medical care of individuals with renal diseases.

JASN is a peer-reviewed journal that publishes the same high quality scientific research that is presented at the American Society of Nephrology Annual Meeting. Each issue covers topics in clinical nephrology, renal and epithelial physiology, renal pathophysiology, body fluid, electrolyte and acid-base metabolism, hypertension, dialysis, renal transplantation, many diseases, and evidence-based medicine. JASN contents also consist of concise reports, comprehensive studies, many reviews, epidemiological studies, comments and news of the society.

CJASN - EDITORIAL LEADERSHIP

Beginning with the inaugural issue in January 2006, the Clinical Journal of the American Society of Nephrology (CJASN) has published original manuscripts involving high quality clinical research relevant to the broad area of clinical nephrology, hypertension, renal transplantation and critical care.

Among the areas emphasized are clinical outcome studies, natural history of renal diseases, chronic kidney disease, dialysis, hypertension, cardiovascular disease in the context of renal dysfunction, diagnostic/therapeutic interventions in renal disease, acute/critical care medicine, renal pathophysiology, body fluids, and electrolyte and acid-based metabolism.

CJASN's content also includes solicited review articles, special features, as well as educational materials focused on all clinical aspects of nephrology.

Epidemiological studies and evidence-based medicine are given high priority while realizing that in certain areas of nephrology information that is less rigorous in terms of quality of evidence is available.
